The Election in Charleston.

It is of course a well known fact that the Mayoralty Election in our "City by the Sea" is over. General Wagner is elected by seven hundred and fifty majority, and the Aldermanic Ticket by the same number. C. G. Meyniger, and date on the Republican Ticket for School Commissioners, was the only one on the rag tag concern elected. We have not time now to write at length our opinion of the result of this contest. But we say this plainly, that the Republicans deserved to be defeated. The miserable and noisy Aldermanic ticket put forth by them was enough, in the beginning, to preclude their certain defeat. Not all the good intentions of Mayor Pillsbury could redeem its miserable qualities. Let this be a lesson to the Republican Party. Let them learn to put forth, hereafter, good and honest men for office. Let them learn to have some respect for intelligence. General Wagner, we have every reason to believe, will make a good Mayor; and as the Aldermen elected with him, even Republicans concede that it is an infinite improvement upon those men who have been directing the destiny of Charleston for the last two years. And we believe that General Wagner will give Republicans as much showing as Mr. Pillsbury, had he been re-elected. Anyhow, it gives to the Democrats a chance to show whether or not they intend to carry out what they preach; and on the other hand, administers a sound and healthy rebuke to a certain wing of our party. We are Republicans, but for God's sake give us decency and intelligence. The result of yesterday's election will cause rejoicings among the Germans. Even this far from Charleston, a jubilee took place in the households of many. Our friend, Capt. H. W. Briggmann, was jubilant, and sent for all his friends and said: "Lager Beer! Lager! Hurrah for Wagner!!!"

Camp Meeting.

The Camp Meeting at Cattle Creek Camp Ground, commenced on Thursday last week ago, and ended on the following Monday. These occasions are generally happy events in the lives of the great bulk of our country folks. The old men regard them as anniversaries of re-unions and rejoicings of friends. Here all meet together. The social restraints and barriers which serve as a barrier against the "comingling" of Squire Snooks and Corporal Gilpin, in the home circle, are not taken here. Squire Snooks will converse with the Corporal at Camp Meeting as nicely as you ever saw. All stand here about upon the same footing. There are no grand mansions here. Each man's dwelling place, while at the Camp Ground, will stand a comparison with that of his neighbor's. There can be no boasting here, because one is about as good as the other. Camp Meeting is a good place for the man who wants to study human nature to go. Here humanity may be seen in all its possible phases. From the veriest piny woods' swell to the more accomplished village bore, all are here, and may be taken in at one glance. Sitting and noticing the vast difference between many of God's creatures at this place, we involuntarily asked ourselves the question, "Wherefore these differences?" At this place, upon the ground, you would see a young man in the company of ladies conversing gracefully, pleasingly, and eloquently upon every subject that presented itself; endeavoring too, the while, to win the good favor of this or that young lady in the crowd. Close by is a scene that contrasts strangely with this one.

Another crowd of ladies and gentlemen are conversing. But how unlike the last one we saw. In this crowd are three or four piny woods' swells, each impressed with the apparent belief that the one who talks and laughs the loudest is the most entitled to the appellation of a gentleman. Some rough country joke is told in words rougher than the appearance of the teller. A good big ha, ha, laugh is its sequel. Perhaps this or that swell will lean away back over the bench upon which he is sitting, knock his feet together, and slap his hands, thereby showing, as he thinks, unmistakable signs of good breeding. If a quiet and accomplished village swell attempts to take a promenade around the stand, before he proceeds fifty yards, it will be remarked of him, "There goes some for who hasn't got any sense," while he's thinking the same thing perhaps of his vulgar critic. Sometimes you will see a half-dozen young men who, to use a Camp-Meeting phrase, "have commenced to feel their keeping," all break off in a hurry to reach a tent upon the opposite side, in front of which are sitting a number of pretty country lasses. But just before reaching it, a halt is made. A huddling together now, as near as they can get to each other, is a part of their tactics. One tells the other to "break the ice" first. "You go and we'll follow. I'll lead the way next time. Pshaw! man what are you afraid of?" Perhaps they will stand in front of the tent, and in hearing of the ladies, parley words with each other after this style for an hour. Meantime the ladies become impatient and a stroll around the stand is proposed. Up they all jump, and off they go. This is a signal for the faint hearted boys to join them. They heed the hint and up to their tender sides the swells bristle; but la! there are four ladies and exactly five swells. Of course one is "out out," and is left to hunt the society of a lady some other place. Now to see this fellow, while in this predicament, is enough to excite a laugh of the funniest sort from the accomplished village swell. He looks all around to see who is watching him, gazes and stretches out his arms like a whipped chicken, and off he puts. But let us hurry along. Camp-Meetings are glorious and jolly things that is, they use to be before politics had anything to do with them. Yes! they were once happy occasions. Each year as these seasons would come and go, old friendships would be renewed, and new ones formed. Remembrances that a year or so's time might have wiped from our memory, were here brightened and set into new life. The aged grand sire met here those he dandled upon his knees long years ago. Here he would utter again those truths and counsels of wisdom which he told his boys long years ago. Here warm heart-greetings and the burning kisses of affection were annually exchanged; and here the religion of God was preached. What a pity it is that there should be aught else at this place. But as faithful chroniclers of passing events it becomes our duty to write of everything as it transpires. There is generally a bright array of talent at these gatherings, and deep and thoughtful sermons may be heard throughout the entire meeting. It pains us to say that for the first time, in the history of Cattle Creek Camp-Meeting, the religion of God was not preached in every sermon. Every man of a candid and unprejudiced mind will admit this at once. We had heard of the same sermon months before. Last Sunday morning was not the first time that this apostle of Christ has polluted the pulpit by delivering himself of this semi-religious political speech. He preached the same thing at Providence Camp-Meeting some weeks ago, and there the more thoughtful of his congregation disapproved, in toto, of its significance, as a communication now in our possession will show. Persons who visit Camp-Meetings do so for the purpose of hearing the Bible preached, of learning moral and religious truths. They do not go there for the purpose of being schooled into the use of billingsgate. Political science, political trickery, political meanness, and political prejudices are taught too much, alas, for our good at home, to receive an impetus from the pulpit. We think that it is using God's pulpit for the most ignoble of purposes to preach politics over its board. Of course the minds of the old and steady will reject anything that is wrong, no matter if it does come from the pulpit; but the question is, can the young, whose prejudices and passions are strong, resist the evil influence excited by such teachings, and at such a place? Experience teaches us that they cannot. If the ministry of Christ are so sorely aggrieved because the Church and State are being merged one into the other, why don't they preach what they feel? Why deliver political sermons from the sanctuary of God? Why fire and add fuel to the passions of the already intolerant and prejudiced? Why say that the negro is kin to the monkey and the orangutan? Why say this or that man is a thief? And lastly, why deviate from the word of God? These are questions we put to those right hearted Ministers of Christ who heard the sermon preached by Mr. Christburg, at Cattle Creek, on Sunday morning last, and who disapproved of his utterances, coming as they did from a professor of Heaven's religion. Mr. Christburg's sermon was nothing more nor less than a tirade of abuse against Republican Government. Our sober readers will wonder at this; but it is just as we record it; and we are not setting down "naught in malice." We were requested that day to notice this sermon, and we have done so. We will not forget to mention it more than once. For a Minister to insult a great portion of his congregation, is something so strangely novel to us that we shall not forget Mr. Christburg's sermon directly. As a new phase of Christianity and a departure from the old landmarks of preaching, we will have no difficulty in remembering Sunday morning last at Cattle Creek Camp Meeting. We will never cease to remember how Mr. Christburg said that the very first sentence of the glorious Declaration of Independence, which was penned by the immortal Jefferson, was a lie to begin with; how the Constitution has been torn into shreds; how the Supreme Court of the United States could be bought; how he spoke of the broad black face negro; and the forty acres of land and a mule. Well may it be said, as we heard a gentleman remark directly after listening to this sermon, "Whither are we drifting!" In mark contrast to the sermon preached by Mr. Christburg was the able one which followed it, delivered by the esteemed Presiding Elder of this Circuit, Mr. Kennedy's sermon of itself was enough to shame the gentleman who preceded him. That eloquent and able man, in short he preached from the Bible, and that eloquently. After this sermon we dined with some friends and left for home, where we related to our mamma what we had heard and seen. In these days of persecution and strife it seems that the persecuted ought to be free from the abuse of the ministry; but last Sunday morning's experience leads us to believe that after awhile those who are abused for opinion's sake, instead of having the sympathy of God's followers, will have to cry out, with Caesar of old, Et tu, Brute!
